10:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. | Workshop 1: The Defence Sector Surge: Redefining European Logistics Demand

Speaker: Kevin Mofid, Head of Logistics & Industrial Research – Savills

As geopolitical shifts drive a historic rise in defence spending across European NATO countries, a new powerhouse is emerging in the industrial real estate landscape. Recent research from Savills indicates that this surge could generate a staggering 400 million sq. ft. of additional demand for warehouse property across the continent. This programme will break down the data behind this projection and explore the long-term implications for the logistics sector. We will examine how defence requirements differ from traditional retail or 3PL needs, which regions are poised for the highest growth, and how Corporate Real Estate (CRE) leaders can navigate the supply chain complexities of this rapidly expanding sector.

11:45 a.m. - 12:45 p.m. | Workshop 2: Corridors of Commerce: What Growing UK - China Trade Means for Logistics Property

Speakers: Sally Bruer, Head of EMEA Logistics and Industrial & Retail Research, Cushman & Wakefield, and Ed Bavister, Head of UK Logistics and Industrial & Retail Research, Cushman & Wakefield

As the UK and China enter a new phase of bilateral engagement, trade volumes, supply chain reconfiguration, and investment motivations are shifting in ways that directly influence the UK's logistics and industrial markets. Industrial policy shifts, evolving bilateral trade dynamics, and ongoing global supply chain pressures continue to drive occupational demand for UK real estate from Chinese businesses. In this session, we will explore the forces shaping UK - China trade flows, identify the key growth sectors, and examine how these trends translate into demand across the UK's logistics and industrial property markets. By the end of the session, delegates will have a clearer understanding of the opportunities emerging from growing UK - China trade, the associated risks, and the strategic pathways for capturing value within the UK's logistics and industrial real estate sector.

This programme moves beyond individual resilience to examine how leadership behaviours and cultural signals directly shape a team's ability to perform. Attendees will learn practical strategies to make sound decisions with incomplete information, reduce fear-driven risk aversion, and build trust without relying on hierarchy. Gain the clarity and responsibility needed to turn decision quality into a strategic advantage when it matters most.
